

For the Paris 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games, Orange is equipping 15,000 athletes, offering a dedicated range of offers for foreign visitors and relying on 5G Private Stand Alone to connect several major venues

Orange today announces dedicated mobile offers for French and foreign tourists, as well as athletes and their staff, that will enable them to enjoy the best connectivity during the Paris 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Orange is also announcing that 5G Private SA will be used by broadcasters at several major Olympic and Paralympic Games venues.

Orange's services and technological expertise form the backbone of the Paris 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Orange will be on hand to offer the four billion television viewers and 15 million spectators expected to attend the Games the best connectivity experience in the history of the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Private Stand Alone 5G at the heart of Paris 2024

Deployed as a complement to the current commercial network, Private 5G SA will be deployed at several major venues, including the Stade de France, Arena Bercy and Paris La Défense Arena as well as along the 6km stretch of the Seine for the opening ceremony and at sea at the Marina de Marseille.

Thanks to its personalised management solutions, this technology guarantees broadcasters a premium service with:

- high, stable upload speeds, essential for transporting high-definition images
- guaranteed ultra-low latency times for sending images in near-real time
- the benefits of superior security intrinsic to the technology

As a reminder, Orange is the exclusive operator for the Paris 2024 Games and will be connecting more than 120 venues and the equivalent of 32 world championships at the same time: from major stadiums such as the Stade de Marseille and the Stade de France, through major areas such as the Invalides, to airports, railway stations, training centres and also iconic and unusual locations such as the Marina de Marseille or Tahiti. In the history of the Olympic and Paralympic Games, the Paris 2024 Organising Committee has entrusted Orange with the largest spectrum ever allocated to an operator, through an unprecedented and responsible technological deployment.

With more than 1,000 technicians involved in these Olympic and Paralympic Games and 28 test events between 2023 and 2024: Orange is ready, Orange is here!
